

disambiguate multiple senses using far less data than is necessary for previous methods multilingual distributional information word representations are learned jointly across languages using English as a bridge nonparametric sense modeling only associate a word with a new sense vector when evidence requires it infers different number of senses for each word in a data-driven manner, avoiding wasting parameters