word representations are learned jointly across languages multilingual distributional information using English as a bridge disambiguate multiple senses using far less data than is necessary for previous methods only associate a word with a new sense vector when evidence requires it infers different number of senses for nonparametric sense modeling each word in a data-driven manner. avoiding wasting parameters